

Power point analyse

1. The artists use effects and a contrast of colour within their images.
2. Most images use blurry images and focus on the effects or text rather than the portrait.
3. Many use fiction within their images and have a deeper meaning behind the images.

Landscape + Shoes

1. From the photography website, I have chosen the two subjects, Landscape and shoes. The reason I chose them is that they are two subjects I've enjoyed editing and taken photos of.

David Muench

1. David Muench is an American landscape and nature photographer known for portraying the American western landscape.
2. He is the primary photographer for more than 60 books and his work appears in many magazines, posters, and private collections.
3. David Muench takes photos of famous landscapes such as "The Grand Canyon".
4. In the primary picture, you can see a contrast between warm colours in the background and much cooler colours on the actual shape. This shows this was taken in the golden hour as you can see the sun glowing in the back and lighting up the area. Next, the shadow add depth to the picture, almost turning this organic shape into an aperture. I could respond and take these types of photos at the coast as the erosion develops unique rock shapes that would suit this well.

Within these photos, I taken them during daylight to highlight the water and I added depth by taking the bottom photos with small objects in front.

Aaron Siskind

- Aaron Siskind was an American photographer whose work focuses on the details of things, presented as flat surfaces to create a new image independent of the original subject.
- Aaron Siskind graduated from the City College of New York in 1926 and taught high school English until he became interested in photography in 1930.
- Aaron Siskind using a contrast of texture and basic images to create his famous portraits. His photos usually consist of basic images with a mixture of black and white to perhaps convey some sort of message.

For these images, I contrasted basic images with different textures taken within nature filled landscapes. This gives them a double exposure effect.

Matthieu Bourel

- Matthieu Bourel is a French visual artist and collage maker who was born in 1976.
- He creates collages and animated GIFs based on old photos collected in books or magazines from which he creates new deconstructed and recomposed images.
- Matthieu Bourel's art consists of multiple traditional cut and paste with collage techniques. Or on the other hand, he may use 3D symbols filled with abstract and vivid colours to add depth and life to his portraits.

Photos in the style of: Matthieu Bourel

For the first image, I had taken the idea of vivid colors and symbolism from the artist to add depth and a cartoon like effect. On the other hand, the second image was a duplication in the style of Matthieu with a basic drop shadow to give the effect of it not being copy and pasted.

Final Piece Pinterest Board

Final Piece Planning Page

I have chosen these 3 designs as my favourites and the designs I will use to inspire my photoshoots and edits. Each of these images have a clear message of trying to sell/advertise you the shoe whilst being presented in an artistic fashion. They are all used to attract customers with the shoe as the main centre piece followed by either bright colours and detail, or a general popular brand which shows that the shoe is a "luxury" product. For example, the AIR Jordan has no description or slogan/tagline but rather it shows its created by Nike and linked with Jordan which makes it seems high quality and a rich product. On the other hand, the "Running SPORT" shoe has no major brand, so it sells you the shoe as this great product which is perfect for sports like running. In addition, it gives the details of the shoes performance to further influence the reader and show them the shoe is incredible within the correct area or areas. Therefore, I will interpret these features into my designs.

Within both photoshoots, I insured to get photos of a range of shoes rather than just one; furthermore, I took roughly 3-4 different angles of each shoe so they can be used in different edits.

Louis Browne

- Born in London, Louis Browne spent his teenage years chasing the music scene around England. Playing in bands, and then shifting to photographing them instead, Louis has worked with artists from Billie Eilish to Mumford & Sons, Olivia Rodrigo to The 1975. Moving into commercial work, Louis has shot for Gucci, Mercedes-Benz and Calvin Klein, alongside featuring in publications like Rollacoaster, Wonderland, British Vogue and Rolling Stone.
- Louis's Art/Photography consists of portraits of people with subtle features of the brand he creates the art for. For example, for Nike he gets multiple people wearing Nike clothing to advertise, rather than blatantly putting the logo on the image.

Photos in the style of: Louis Browne

- During the time of shooting the image, I took the photo from the bottom of the shoe to the top to give a effect of depth and to make the image look more interesting rather than a basic shoe.

Final Piece Photo 1

- I used the base design of the image on the far right to inspire my edit. I create a shadow on the shoe to add depth and a light gradient onto the text to make it less bland.

Final Piece Photo 2

- I used the same illustration in my design except I used brighter and more vivid colors rather than using dark colors like the inspiration image (on the far right).

- I used the same design as the far-left image to create my response. Furthermore, I experimented with gradients, drop shadows and the lasso tool to create the edit.

1. At type of long exposure photography that highlights the movement of light. By keeping the camera shutter open for a long period of time, you can collect more light and show how that light moves across the frame.
2. Light trail photography is an interesting and special type of photography because you're able to depict something that isn't real in any one instant. Consequently, I will use light trail photography to make my images seem more terrestrial rather than plain.
3. Furthermore, I will utilize light trail photography to emphasise effects or details of a certain portrait, make it the main element within an edit, or to create new details to make the images seems for space-like.

NIKE

1. Within their images, Nike features a faded background with a mix of a potential model, but always one of their products. Furthermore, multiple of their other photos consist of a down-top view, usually starting from the shoe.
2. They take high quality photos and either contrast or link the background to the photo. Another part of the Nike photoshoots is the lighting. Rather than simply using a faded background, you can see multiple different colours within the images or a bright light to highlight the product.
3. Therefore, I will insure to gain a high-quality medium and use multiple different coloured lights/strong lights to achieve these types of portraits.

NIKE CAMPAIGN

YOU CAN'T STOP SPORT.

We may start from different places, but together we'll rise stronger.

Credit: Nike

1. "You Can't Stop Us" is a marketing campaign that celebrates the return of sports after the pandemic. The campaign features a video montage of athletes from different sports and backgrounds, highlighting the resilience and unity of the sports community.
2. Here are some of the key marketing strategies that made this campaign so special:
 - First, the emotional appeal. The campaign taps into the emotions of the audience, such as hope, joy, courage, and solidarity. The video uses powerful narration, music, and imagery to convey these emotions and create an emotional bond with the viewers.
 - Second, cultural relevance. The campaign reflects the current social and cultural issues that affect the sports world and beyond, such as racial justice, gender equality, environmental sustainability, and mental health. The video features athletes who are role models and activists for these causes.

Supreme

1. Supreme is known for its limited-edition releases and collaborations with other brands and artists. The brand has collaborated with everyone from Nike and Vans to The North Face and Louis Vuitton. These collaborations are often highly sought-after and can sell out in minutes.
2. Most Supreme images include a red box with the word "Supreme" through it. Although basic, it is one of the most authentic logos in the community, almost anyone will be able to spot the logo.
3. Despite its decreasing popularity, Supreme remains a beloved brand within the streetwear community, and it's unlikely that it will disappear completely anytime soon. As a result, I will apply the unique style of supreme to my edits.

Adidas

1. Adidas (styled as "adidas" since 1949) is a prominent German manufacturer of athletic shoes and apparel, identified by its three-stripe trademark. Although basic, the 3 stripes are globally known and recognised as the official adidas logo, therefore giving them a wider identity.
2. Adidas's photoshoots are very similar if not identical to Nikes photoshoot in the way of how they both use close images and usually a blurry background.
3. Consequently, I will apply these strategies and techniques to achieve similar images.

Corteiz

1. Clint is the founder of Corteiz, a cult London streetwear label founded in 2017. Corteiz exploded in popularity during the pandemic, and its logo depicting the former prison island Alcatraz has become a recognisable signature on the streets of London and beyond.
2. Corteiz has exploded across the scene due to its fresh designs and marketing prowess. It has gained a loyal following that can be seen from its sold-out drops and the noise created around its releases

TRAPSTAR LONDON

IN 2008, THREE SCHOOL FRIENDS FROM WEST LONDON STARTED MAKING THEIR OWN T-SHIRTS AND SELLING THEM AT PORTOBELLO MARKET. NOW TRAPSTAR IS A GLOBAL FASHION BRAND, WORN BY STARS LIKE RHIANNA, JAY-Z AND STORMZY. TRAPSTAR TAKES ITS NAME FROM TRAP MUSIC, A SUBGENRE OF RAP THAT ORIGINATED IN THE SOUTHERN UNITED STATES. THE LABEL WAS FOUNDED BY MIKEY, LEE AND WILL, WHO, DESPITE THEIR SUCCESS, ARE TRYING TO MAINTAIN A DEGREE OF ANONYMITY.

Mock Exam Poster

As seen on the left, I have created a poster to advertise a streetwear brand. To create poster, I have imported 2 images and used the lasso tool to create ridges on the side of the images then I painted the bits that were cut of white and modified them to seem like the images were ripped. Secondly, I used a stroke to make bold titles to make them stand out. The inspiration behind this poster are Nike photoshoots. Looking back in hindsight, I should have put some sort of logo to identify the streetwear brand this poster belongs too.

Mock Exam Logo/Poster

As seen on the left, I have created a logo/poster for the brand Dolce and Gabbana. To make it, I started with cutting out an image of a shoe and adding a shadow to make it look more realistic. Next, I got a picture of the D and G logo; title and after I colored them white to fit with the black background. Aside from the brand itself, there was no inspiration behind it. Overall, there is nothing I would change as the contrast between the white and black; the simplicity of the image makes it feel very neat and not too detail heavy.

STREET-WARE

Mock Exam Zine Cover

To create the cover I have used simple text with different type of fonts (bold, light etc.) to make the text seem more impactful. Although, I have used a spline/pen tool to create the arrow so perfectly. Online I found a streetwear zine which inspired me to create this entire zine . If I was to change something, I would fix the streetwear spelling as for whatever reason I spelt it wrong when I was making it.

Mint

The new streetware brand "Mint" is now back in the game with their new limited edition "Max Fresh" shoes. These shoes are a combination of a beautiful and vivid red shade and a pale white to make your shoes stand out and be unique.

Furthermore, if perhaps the red & white do not suit your liking, try our black and white "Full Fresh", with the same amount of style and comfort but at a cheaper price.

Mock Exam Zine Page 1-2

To create the first 2 pages, I used the basic color pallet of red and white with some information and images scattered around the screen. Just as stated before, the only thing I would really change would be the streetwear spelling.

Mock Exam Zine Page 3-4

ADIDAS x MAN UNITED

Explore the world of adidas X Man United clothing. From sleek jerseys to trendy streetwear, we've got you covered. Join the community of fashion-forward football fans and let's showcase our love for the beautiful game in style.

To create the last 2 pages, I used the same method as stated before. As for what I would change would be center the text/information more, so the color of it fits in with the background, more.

Mock Exam Poster 2

To create the second poster I used a custom brush and the color pallet of red, white and black to make the foundation- along with the main image. Then I add more detail in the form of a title, QR code and "Save 50%" title in the form a note. The inspiration behind this image is some random streetwear poster I found on the internet. Once again, I would change the streetwear text to the correct spelling if I had the chance.

Mock Exam Poster 3

To make the third poster I used black and white; the lasso tool to create the unique background. Next, I added my custom "Mint" logo in the top left along with a red rectangle with the word "Streetwear" inside for some extra detail. Furthermore, I added QR code in the bottom left and 3 rectangles to give the discount title some variety. If I had to change something for the 3rd time it would be to fix the spelling of streetwear.

Mock Exam Poster 4

To make the final poster I used black, red and white; the lasso tool to create the background. Next, I added my custom "Mint" logo in the bottom right along with a link to the mint website- not real. Next, I used the stroke tool to create title New Sale and once the details were complete, I imported the images.

Pepsi

1. Pepsi utilizes water in their adverts to make the drink seem fresher. In addition, pepsi uses ice to convey that the drink tastes better chilled.
2. The PepsiCo name is deeply embedded within American pop culture. It emerged in 1965, when the Pepsi-Cola Company merged with Frito-Lay, Inc.

Sustainability

1. Companies convince their audience effectively, using compelling visuals and storytelling to create emotional connections, highlight the impact of ocean waste on marine life and ecosystems, and showcase actionable steps individuals can take to combat ocean waste.
2. By emphasizing the urgency of the issue and empowering viewers to make a difference, advertisements can inspire people to act and drive positive change.
